Q1. Cars are safer than planes. Fifty percent of plane accidents result in death, while only one percent of car accidents result in death. Which of the following, if true, would most seriously weaken the argument above?

- Planes are inspected more often than cars.
- The number of car accidents is several hundred thousand times higher than the number of plane accidents
- Pilots never fly under the influence of alcohol, while car drivers often do
- Plane accidents are usually the fault of air traffic controllers, not pilots.

Q2. The city's public transportation system should be removed from the jurisdiction of the municipal government, which finds it politically impossible either to raise fares or to institute cost-saving reductions in service. If public transportation were handled by a private firm, profits would be vigorously pursued, thereby eliminating the necessity for covering operating costs with government funds. The statements above best support the conclusion that

- The private firms that would handle public transportation would have experience in the transportation industry
- political considerations would not prevent private firms from ensuring that revenues cover operating costs
- .private firms would receive government funding if it were needed to cover operating costs
- the public would approve the cost-cutting actions taken by the private firm

Q3. The Japanese economic model created strong domestic industries through subsidies from its Ministry of Trade and by closing off competitive foreign firms to its domestic market. This strategy promised to help economic growth by incubating domestic industries. New Japanese industries could count on a known local demand and would be protected from competition by tariffs and other barriers. The program could reduce the amount of imports and therefore improve the nation's balance of trade. Which of the following, based on the passage above, is a weakness in this economic strategy?

- A protectionist policy will create animosity among other nations.

- Fast growth of small industries will create a class of millionaires and increase the inequality of income
- Subsidies and import constraints keep domestic prices high and impose a burden on consumers
- Quotas are more regressive than tariffs

Q4. Ever since I arrived at the college last week, I've been shocked by the poor behaviour of the students. The student population is completely lacking in proper social skills. Which of the following, if true, would weaken the above conclusion?

- Students who are away from their parents often exhibit rude behaviour
- The college numbers over 50,000 students.
- The narrator is a student and has not interacted with many students
- Social skills should not be expected of college students

Q5. From what mountains or gardens would future painters draw their inspiration? Would move poets to craft their symphonies, theologians to contemplate the meaning of God, and philosophers write their verse.

Q7. Sales taxes tend to be regressive, affecting poor people more severely than wealthy people. When all purchases of consumer goods are taxed at a fixed percentage of the purchase price, poor people pay a larger proportion of their income in sales taxes than wealthy people do.

It can be correctly inferred on the basis of the statements above that which of the following is true?

Poor people constitute a larger proportion of the taxpaying population than wealthy people do.

Poor people spend a larger proportion of their income on purchases of consumer goods than wealthy people do.

Wealthy people pay, on average, a larger amount of sales taxes than poor people do.

The total amount spent by all poor people on purchases of consumer goods exceeds the total amount spent by all wealthy people on consumer goods.

Q9. Teenagers are often priced out of the labor market by the government-mandated minimum-wage level because employers cannot afford to pay that much for extra help. Therefore, if Congress institutes a subminimum wage, a new lower legal wage for teenagers, the teenage unemployment rate, which has been rising since 1960, will no longer increase.

Which of the following, if true, would most weaken the argument above?

Since 1960 the teenage unemployment rate has risen when the minimum wage has risen.

Since 1960 the teenage unemployment rate has risen even when the minimum wage remained constant.

Employers often hire extra help during holiday and warm weather seasons.

The teenage unemployment rate rose more quickly in the 1970's than it did in the 1960's

Q11. Throughout the 1950's, there were increases in the numbers of dead birds found in agricultural areas after pesticide sprayings. Pesticide manufacturers claimed that the publicity given to bird deaths stimulated volunteers to look for dead birds, and that the increase in numbers reported was attributable to the increase in the number of people looking.

Processing math: 100% Which of the following statements, if true, would help to refute the claim of the pesticide manufacturers?

- The publicity given to bird deaths was largely regional and never reached national proportions
- Pesticide sprayings were timed to coincide with various phases of the life cycles of the insects they destroyed
- No provision was made to ensure that a dead bird would not be reported by more than one observer.
- Initial increases in bird deaths had been noticed by agricultural workers long before any publicity had been given to the matter

Q12. To entice customers away from competitors, Red Label supermarkets have begun offering discounts on home appliances to customers who spend 50 or more on any shopping trip to Red Label. Red Label executives claim that the discount program has been a huge success, since cash register receipts of 50 or more are up thirty percent since the beginning of the program.

Which of the following, if true, most seriously weakens the claim of the Red Label executives?

- Most people who switched to Red Label after the program began spend more than $50 each time they shop at Red Label
- Most people whose average grocery bill is less than $50 would not be persuaded to spend more by any discount program.
- Most people who received discounts on home appliances through Red Label's program will shop at Red Label after the program ends
- Almost all of the people who have begun spending $50 or more at Red Label since the discount program began are long time customers who have increased the average amount of their shopping bills by making fewer trips.

Common Content:

Statement: According to a recent survey, managers of large companies are paid more than managers of small companies. It does not seem fair that just because a manager is heading a big company s/he should be paid more. Manager's salary should be related to his contribution to the company's growth, especially growth in terms of sales and profits. Of course, big companies are more complex than the small, but all managers require notable amount of energy and time in managing companies. All managers should be paid according to their performance.

Q72. Which of the following, if true, would strengthen the speaker's argument?

- Managers of small companies come from good educational background.
- Managers in big companies take much longer to reach to the top, as compared to their counterparts in smaller companies.
- Managers of big companies are very difficult to hire.
- A few big family businesses have managers from within the family.

Q73. A person seeking to refute the argument might argue that

- Managers should be paid equally.
- Managing big companies is more challenging than small.
- If managers of small companies perform well, the company would become big and so would the managers' salary.
- Managers who travel more should be paid more.
